

I wish my right to privacy would be upheld. Indiana has stopped unwanted calls to a great extent. If companies wish to push for more sales, they still can use regular US mail. Calling at dinner, early in the morning, pushy people, and so on violate MY RIGHTS. The Constitution grants me rights. I wish them to be upheld. There is still an option of direct mailing. India and other countries might not like it, but I am worried about American jobs and the privacy of my family. Call during family time is not only rude, but should be limited to family and friends. Businesses can use standard mail!

Sincerely,
David Cox
